Excerpt: . . . 12 Preemption Perhaps the most difficult conflict identified during our hearings is over preemption of state laws. Among large segments of the health industry, a major benefit to federal legislation is a high degree of regulatory uniformity throughout the country. The interstate nature of health care treatment and payment activities is readily apparent. By one estimate, approximately half of the U. S. population lives near the border of another state. To have a patient work in the District of Columbia, reside in Maryland, and receive care in Virginia creates a nightmare for the health care system to track unless substantial uniformity of policies and procedures exists. It will be difficult for many involved in electronic transfers of health data to accept any proposal that does not offer significant relief from the prospect of 50 different state laws...
