Excerpt: . . . likely, said Mr. Sampson, moodily. A young lady of your stamp wont remain single. Youre too attractive and too lively. No, youll marry some scamp for the sake of his good looks: and perhaps the day will come when youll remember this evening, and feel sorry that you rejected an honest mans offer. They were at the house by this time, much to Celias relief, as she felt that the conversation could hardly be carried on further without unpleasantness. She stopped in the hall, and offered her hand to her dejected admirer. Shake hands, Mr. Sampson, to show that you bear no malice, she said. Be assured I shall always like and respect you as a friend of our family. She did not wait for his answer, but tripped lightly upstairs, determined not to make her appearance again that evening. Tom Sampson was inclined...
